CROSS-BORDER ARMED BANDITRY IN THE NORTH-EAST Issues in National security and Nigeria's Relations with its Neighbours

Edited by:
Bassey E. Ate & Bola A. Akinterinwa

This volume is the result of the Yola workshop organised under the cross-border relations workshop series by the Nigerian Institute of International Affairs. The workshop addressed the implications of the recurrent cross-border armed incursions for internal security and Nigeria's relations with Cameroun, Chad and Niger Republics in the North-East zone of the federation.

The broad conclusion which emerged at the end of three days of deliberations in this forum was that Nigeria and its two contiguous neighbours in this zone needed to closely coordinate their security and socio-economic development policies in order to overcome the mutual vulnerabilities of their peoples to common threats. To come to this conclusion, the chapters in this volume addressed a multitude of related issues, which had been the subject of intense discussion at the workshop by scholars, government functionaries, social activists and traditional authorities with expert knowledge of the issues at stake.

This publication, as presented, allows the general public to be informed and participate in the debate about the need for Nigeria to vigorously pursue an "integrative" policy in managing its security, social, economic and cultural relations with its immediate neighbours, especially with particular regard to the cross-border communities.

CROSS-BORDER SECURITY, COOPERATION AND INTEGRATION Focus on Nigeria's Immediate Neighbours in the North-West Zone

Edited by:
Rafiu A. Akindele & Bola A. Akinterinwa

This volume reports the deliberations at the workshop organized by the Nigerian Institute of International Affairs on Cross-Border Security, Cooperation and Integration with a Focus on Nigeria's Immediate Neighbours in the North-West Zone. The workshop examined (i) the nature of security of the border regions of Nigeria, bearing in mind Nigeria's national interest; (ii) the issue of free movement of persons, goods and services, as well as right of residence and establishment in Nigeria and its immediate neighbours; (iii) the nature of inter-dependency of the Nigerian economy and those of the neighbouring states and its implications for sub-regional cooperation and integration; and (iv) the impact of informal trade between Nigeria and her immediate neighbours. In addition, the issues of religious uprising, ethnic clashes and sub-regional integration in Nigeria's North-West zone were also addressed.

This publication as noted in the publication on cross-border armed banditry in the north-east zone of Nigeria, allows the general public to be informed and participate in the debate about the need for Nigeria to vigorously pursue an "integrative" policy in managing its security, social, economic and cultural relations with its immediate neighbours, especially with particular regard to the cross-border communities.

NIGERIAN INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS AT 50:
The Making of a World Institute in Africa

By:
Babatunde S. Emmanuel

This volume, NIIA at 50, is presented to commemorate the historic Golden Jubilee of the Nigerian Institute of International Affairs. It relays the landmark developments in the making of a “World Institute in Africa” and presents the story of the Institute as Nigeria’s foremost think-tank on foreign policy, collated from official records which spanned a period of 50 years. It highlights the milestones in the development of NIIA and gives account of how a handful of patriotic men and women with vision positively influenced and shaped the course of their country.

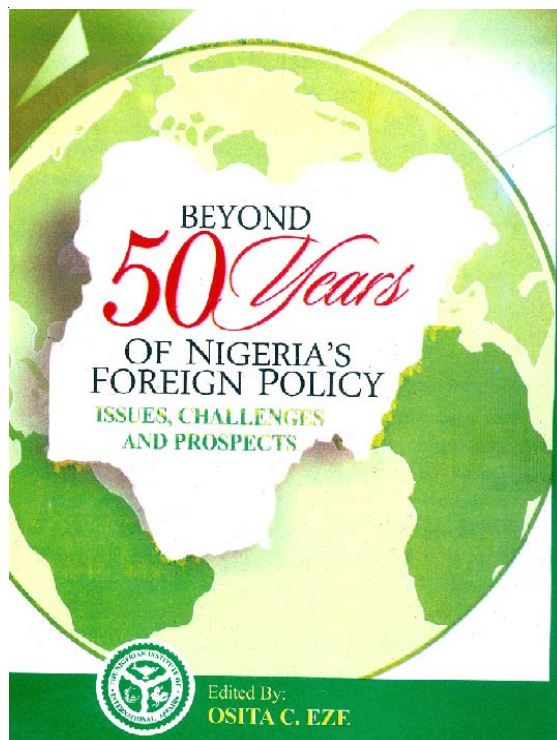

In its conclusion, the book emphasizes the need for the NIIA, as a research Institute, to live up to the expectation of an international think-tank and continue to discharge its responsibility as a specialized instrument of foreign policy formulation in the country, since research is the backbone of the entire process of designing and shaping foreign policy in the world of today.

BEYOND 50 YEARS OF NIGERIA'S FOREIGN POLICY: ISSUES, CHALLENGES AND PROSPECT

Edited by: Osita C. Eze

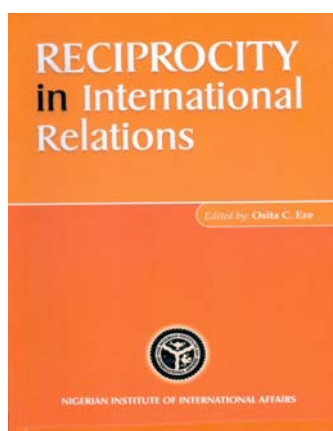

Fifty years of Nigeria's relationship with the rest of the world has generally reflected its efforts at promoting Africa's interests and at the same time grappling with its domestic development. This selected and annotated bibliography seeks to provide the much-needed literature on Nigeria's foreign policy and its driving factors. It showcases a compilation of the works of selected Nigerian and international authors and their respective analytical perspectives on Nigeria's foreign policy.

Fifty-years of Nigeria's foreign policy: A Select Annotated Bibliography is an effort to update the previous book on Nigeria's foreign relations. This book is enriched with additional titles published from 2001 to date. The coverage remains the same, and the bibliography is structured into relevant subjects for easy usage. This Text is an essential companion for Researchers, Scholars, Diplomats, Students and the General Public who are interested in Nigeria's foreign relations.

RECIPROCITY IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Edited by: Osita C. Eze

In practical terms, reciprocity is colour blind. It is stone deaf and neutral. It depends on what side of the fence one is. No one is absolutely a winner or a loser. It depends on how you play the game, or how well organized or disorganized you are in managing your affairs. Ethical considerations hardly arise. It is like a football game. If you are very well organized, motivated and are properly trained and co-ordinated in your moves, you are likely to score more goals and defeat your opponent. If you are ill-prepared and have not trained hard enough and are less co-ordinated than your opponent, you are likely to come out the loser.

We, in Nigeria have no right to gripe over unequal reciprocal treatment from other nations; be they our neighbours or distant countries. Our problem is, essentially, one of lack of management, lack of capacity; lack of proper and effective co-ordination; and, above, all, failure of our institutions.

NEW SCRAMBLE FOR AFRICA

Edited by: Osita C. Eze and Chike A. Anigbo

It would be difficult to understand the reality of the "New Scramble for Africa" without a prior reference to the historical event that took place in the 19th century from which this terminology is derived. The event was the Berlin Conference of 1884-85 at which the continent of Africa was divided among the European powers. The current reference to a new scramble however connotes a slightly different focus. While the old scramble focused upon the acquisition and demarcation of territory, the new scramble is not interested in redefining national borders but rather the continent's natural resources. These include oil, diamonds, timber, gold, uranium, ivory, natural gas and a host of others. Furthermore, In addition to the former colonial powers (France, Britain, Belgium, etc.), who have maintained their presence on the continent through continued neo-colonial ties, and the activities of various multinational and transnational firms, China and India have joined the "scramble". These powers are two of Asia's largest economies with populations of over a billion each and rapidly industrializing and developing economies. These are powers whose economies are in desperate need of resources to maintain their rapid pace of industrialization. When the United States of America, with its entrenched interests in African petroleum resources, is brought into the picture then the meaning of a "new scramble" can be adequately comprehended.

NIGERIA SECURITY INTEREST IN AFRICA

Edited by

Osita C. Eze, Chike Anigbo & Charles Q. Dokubo

A country's security must be citizen-centred with the primary objective of addressing the basic needs of the people for food, clothing and shelter, and lots more, as its complexity grows in terms of needs. It must seek to protect and promote the social well-being and economic security of the citizenry. Such a comprehensive conception of security serves the purpose of promoting a strong sense of belonging, collective ownership and allegiance to the nation-state; a shared vision as well as a shared future among the citizenry. Indeed, the security of a country must be, construed in the terms of the capacity of an individual citizen to live in peace with access to basic needs of life while participating fully in the affairs of his country freely and enjoying, therein, all his fundamental human rights.

NIGERIA SECURITY INTEREST IN AFRICA

Edited by Osita C. Eze & Osita Agbu

It is very interesting that Nigeria and Russia both exhibit what one may refer to as a plethora of commonalities that include the practice of federalism, are regional leaders in their own right, have about the same population size, are countries in transition, are advancing from authoritarian rule to democracy, and are endowed with immense human and natural resources like agricultural land and hydrocarbons. Ordinarily, these commonalities should contribute to strengthening relations between both countries. The flip side, however, is that Nigeria and Russia also share similar economic and developmental problems of infrastructure development, education, housing, medicare, pension matters, high unemployment rate and problems associated with property rights, corruption and environmental pollution.

AFRICA AND EUROPE IN THE 21ST CENTURY

Edited by: Osita C. Eze and Amadu Sesay

Africa and Europe in the 21st Century critically examines the effects of the Joint Strategic Partnership Agreement on African countries individually and collectively; the continent as a whole; and the future of Euro-Africa relations, in the context of the rapidly changing global landscape with emerging influential actors like Brazil, Russia, India, and China, the so-called BRIC states. The book captures some of the most salient issues in the latest attempt by Africa and Europe to enhance their mutual cooperation. It is a most welcome development, especially as it is coming on the eve of the 3rd Africa-EU summit in November 2010. Students of integration and development, foreign policy, diplomats, policy makers, bureaucrats in the EU, the AU and the various regional economic communities, RECs, as well as members of civil society organizations, will find in the book an indispensable companion and reference source. It will certainly add to the already lively debate on the pros and cons of the latest, and perhaps the most elaborate, agreement between Africa and Europe. I warmly recommend it to libraries and research institutes in Africa and abroad, and to all those who are interested in promoting equitable and sustainable partnerships between Africa and Europe, this century and beyond.

CLIMATE CHANGE AND HUMAN SECURITY IN NIGERIA

Edited by: Osita C. Eze and Ogaba Oche

The issue of climate change is becoming more threatening not only to the socio-economic lives of nations but also to human existence, especially in the developing nations of Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Small Island States. In Nigeria, for example, the effects of climate change on people, particularly the legion of the poor, are severe. Thus, for instance, farmers, pastoralists, fishing communities and town dwellers are vulnerable to changes in water availability and lower agricultural productivity. Warmer climate increases the risk of contracting vector-borne diseases such as malaria. The economic implications of these changes are enormous. Receipts from agricultural activities, which account for over half the jobs and GDP in Nigeria, may decline sharply. Thus, as national revenues are strained, demand for public expenditures will increase. Climate change also has the potential of undermining the achievements of the Millennium Development Goals, MDGs, such as the eradication of extreme poverty and hunger by 2015.

ECOWAS: MILESTONES IN REGIONAL INTEGRATION

Edited by U. Joy Ogwu

Two basic rationales underpin the logic of integration in West Africa. The first is that integration would result in the expansion of markets which can be of great advantage to various industries and businesses. The second is that the removal of trade barriers between member states would facilitate coordinated industrial planning among member states regarding the production of specific goods. The overall effect of regional integration therefore should be to facilitate the process of rapid regional growth and development.

FOREIGN POLICY AND NIGERIA'S ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Edited by Osita C. Eze & Peter A. Egom

In a rapidly globalizing world, where national economies must become competitive in order to stay afloat, strategic thinking and astute management of national resources are critical for sustainable economic development. For Nigeria as a country, the challenge has always been how to channel her vast human and natural resources through a framework that will qualitatively transform the standard of living for her teeming population. The impression which has gained ground worldwide that Nigeria is a very rich country with very poor people should by now be a source of a great anxiety to us as a country.

E&P INDUSTRY IN SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA

Edited by Osita C. Eze & Peter A. Egom

A critical element in the emerging dynamics of the SSA oil and gas nationalism is the role of Nigeria as a leading oil and gas producer and regional power with the capacity to provide leadership and drive regional cooperation in this critical area. Considering the achievements that Nigeria has made so far in the upstream and downstream sectors of the industry, there is no doubt that Nigeria carries great responsibility for dictating the direction of the African oil and gas nationalism.

CITIZEN DIPLOMACY

Edited by Osita C. Eze

Citizen Diplomacy, in consonance with the constitutional principles and directives, places priority on the protection of the interest of the Nigerian citizen, both at home and abroad. This means the protection of the rights, dignity and privileges of Nigerian citizens wherever they may be. This is to remain the primary responsibility of Nigeria's diplomacy. And this emergent approach to the country's diplomacy is to be true for Nigerians at home as for those in the Diaspora. The apparent or perceived 'criminalization' of our compatriots abroad has assumed a worrisome dimension. It has become unacceptable. This is why Nigeria's diplomacy under the present dispensation is poised to diligently address it.

AU AND THE FUTURE OF AFRICA

Edited by: U. Joy Ogwu & Warisu O. Alli

The OAU founded in 1963 has achieved the main objective for which it was established: the political emancipation of all African peoples from under the yoke of the colonial rule and bondage of racist regimes and apartheid. The challenges before the AU, which emerged in July 2002, is probably more complex, involving the liberation of Africa from a new form of subjugation: poverty, external debt and all manner of problems of development. These are the problems confronting African states as the continent grapples with the challenges of the 21st century.

THE MANAGEMENT OF NIGERIA'S ENERGY RESOURCES FOR NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Edited by: Chibuzo N. Nwoke and Daniel A. Omoweh

The book examines the origin and nature of the protracted crisis in the preservation of the colonial exploitative economic policies and structures by the Nigerian state; and the state managers' reliance on political power to accumulate in oil and gas sector and examining the crisis, looking critically at the nature of Nigeria state, its mode of surplus extraction and the consequences for the country's energy industry. It also looks at the paradox of Nigeria's huge energy resource endowments; yet the country is one of the worst hit by energy crisis in Africa, paying attention to the mismanagement of oil and gas and poor development of other alternative energy resources. The book examines policy issues in the context of the nature of the policy design and implementation, the international relations dimension and the legal framework for the development of energy resources. Finally, it proffered alternative strategies for redressing the country's energy crisis.
